Here's a draft of the map. The GPS data is differentially corrected. I had a good map with a legend, etc., but I moved some files and lost the "internal mapping" for shape files in ArcMap, so I will have to prepare maps again.

The curved black line is the area disturbed. The straight black line is a claim line. The blue line is a quarry (recent or active areas of extraction). The green line is the stockpile of stone pallets and other products, equipment storage, etc. You'll notice the "east quarry" has two blue lines. I surveyed it twice and I need to do some editing in shape files to get one outline.
